CHAIR MESSAGE

PAUL HOFFERT / CHAIR

A word from the Chair

2012 was an exciting year for The Bell Fund. We have been busy adjusting the helm to ensure we are steering true north as the winds of change blow through our industry.

Our new more frequent (monthly) application and funding schedule for low budget production, development and professional development projects has been embraced with enthusiasm.

We've responded to requests from Bell Fund clients by adding Digital Pilots, Performance Accelerator, and Legacy programs and we've expanded our Low Budget Digital Media Production with a Television Licence fee top-up (effective January 2013). The Bell Fund now provides a rich matrix of support that caters to producers' needs over a range of projects and development cycles.

Now in our fifteenth year, the Bell Fund is proud to be an independent private supporter for the creation of Canadian digital/TV multi-platform projects. Bell Fund was here when the idea of watching programs on screens other than television sets was considered fanciful and unlikely. Fifteen years later, we continue to support a now vibrant industry that produces excellent Canadian content for TVs, computers, phones, tablets, and other platforms yet to come. Nowadays, almost nobody watches just television anymore.

This year Bell TV added contributions from its Fibe™ TV service to its original Satellite TV service contributions to the Bell Fund. We are thankful for the continuing support of Aliant, Cablevision du Nord de Québec and the BCE/CTV Benefits.

VICE-CHAIR'S MESSAGE

LORI ROSENBERG / VICE-CHAIR'S

A word from the Vice-Chair

It seems hard to believe that when the Bell Fund was launched it had to struggle to convince broadcasters and tv producers that there were exciting new opportunities for their television programs by creating extended, interactive digital media content for the web (there was only the web then). And, that this would not threaten their very existence. Being first in your field has its challenges! Now, fifteen years later, the second screen is integral to the television experience and has proven to be a powerful tool for content creators, broadcasters and distributors.

They have recognized that they can capture and engage audiences on different platforms and involve them in the development of the content that they want to see. At the same time, social media is driving audiences to discover new television programs – the symbiotic ecosystem that was the inspiration for the Bell Fund. Next-gen storytellers are using television shows as a hub for the communities they create and the many experiences they can offer to enhance the traditional linear story.

Canada has created a wealth of talented and experienced cross-platform/transmedia/second screen producers, recognized and admired internationally. The Bell Fund has played a key role in encouraging experimentation and interactive experiences with investments of nearly $ 120 M in 1021 projects in the past 15 years. Innovation and audience engagement have been the foundations of Bell Fund's standards of excellence.

As the industry has evolved, the Bell Fund has adapted its focus and expectations to encourage the media industry to take advantage of the opportunities that new technologies provide. In 2012, several new funding programs were undertaken with this goal. The TV Development Digital Pilots program encourages the use of digital platforms and audience feedback to develop high quality programs for television. The Performance Accelerator program rewards successful digital projects with the funding to continue to grow their success. The Legacy program makes it possible to create digital extensions for classics of Canadian television.

Watching television is not the same, and will not be the same again. The Bell Fund encourages a meaningful and valuable multi-platform experience for our audiences.
